The University
HOMESTEAD ASSOCIATION

THE LANDS OF THE ABOVE-NAMED ASSOCIATION are situated in San Francisco and are eligibly and most desirably located, adjoining the grounds purchased by the Presbyterian University Society, on which College buildings are to be at once erected. The site is less than thirty minutes ride from Montgomery street; lying just west or back of the lands of the South San Francisco Homestead and Railroad Association and the Bay View Park, almost within a stone's throw of ST. MARY'S COLLEGE.

The tract will require little or no grading, there being scarcely a single lot on which it would not be safe to build without any change of grade. It commands a

Beautiful View of the Bay,

And its opposite shore, and has a soil of extreme richness. So great are the natural attractions of the spot, that very many of the wealthy citizens of San Francisco have already purchased whole blocks in the same tract, and design building residences thereon.

The Rev. E. Thomas, D. D.,

Is President of the Association; Lester L. Robinson, formerly Vice President of the Sacramento Railroad Company, is the Treasurer, and Thomas B. Lewis, formerly of Portland, Secretary.

Four lots, 25x120 feet each, constitute a share, costing $315—paid in monthly installments of $10 each, after the first payment of $20 has been made.

Maps and books giving full information of the workings of the Association can be obtained at the store of J. L. PARRISH & CO.

It is an easy and a cheap way for young men to procure property which will in a few years make them independent.

The above liberal offer is made to the traveling public to enable the subscriber to pay his debts, and not with any reference to speculation, as all the property is valued at much less than its cost, (the Steamer alone having cost $11,000), and the price for carrying passengers to Astoria being much less than the usual fare.

The Union League at its session yesterday, discussed resolutions of censure of Horace Greeley, introduced by G. W. Blunt. A substitute was offered by T. B. Van Buren, condemning the bailing of Davis, without alluding to Greeley. His amended resolution intimates that there was nothing in the action of Greeley calling for proceedings of the Club, which passed.

Several Romanish priests left on the steamer from New York yesterday, to attend the assembly of Prelates on the anniversary of the martyrdom of St. Peter; among them Archbishop Purcell, of Cincinnati, who carries with him a silver model of the yacht Henrietta, filled with $70,000 in gold pieces as a present to the Pope.

Heavy Gale at Sea.

NEW YORK, May 25.—Arrived, ship Renard. March 21st she experienced heavy gales which continued for sixteen days. On the 24th a tremendous sea carried away her bulwarks, bow sprit, fore and topmast and started the hatches, etc. It was fourteen hours before the crew could clear the wreck, the wind blowing a hurricane and the ship lying to on her beam ends most of the time. Having discovered a leak making five inches an hour, the Captain threw her cargo overboard until he found the leak and stopped it, after that she continued to leak an inch hourly. Variable weather experienced since. April 16th, spoke ship Stalwart from San Francisco bound for Liverpool.

Stansberry Delivers an Opinion.

Attorney General Stansberry's opinion on the right of rebels to vote and hold office, occupied four columns of the Tribune. He elaborately examines the leading act which excludes officers who have taken part in the rebellion, officers of military included. It does not apply to municipal officers which were not strictly State, Judicial or Executive officers—an uncertain definition which it is contended must be construed in favor of the voter—a vast body of officers not positively excluded on disqualification based on breaking the oath of allegiance to the United States, comprehending the military as well as the civil officers but applying more generally to State officers. The phrase "enemies of the United States," should be strictly confined to foreign nations. The Attorney General is not quite prepared to say that Congress may not have used it as applicable to participants in rebellion. The Tribune and other Republican papers are dissatisfied with this opinion.

NEW YORK, May 27.—The drift of Stansberry's argument is summed up in his own words, thus: The intent of these acts is to enable the people of each of these States to form a constitution for the state acting, by the exercise of the right of suffrage, and there are clauses in the act giving the right by general terms of description to the people generally, and especially those who never enjoyed the right before, and other clauses which, by general terms, take away the right from those who have always enjoyed it. The construction as to the clauses which give the right, must be liberal, and to them the general terms must not be restricted, but to those clauses which derogate from the existing rule, the construction must be construed so that none shall be excluded who are not clearly within the letter and intent.

Failure of the Eight Hour Law—Tragedy in Chicago.

NEW YORK, May 25.—A Washington special says a semi-official report from General Porfirio Diaz to Senor Romero, the Mexican Minister, dated Guadalupe Hidalgo on the 3d, giving an account of the capture of Puebla, does not mention any slaughter of Imperial officers. Since the investment of Mexico, the Imperial Ministers were offered to be surrendered if personal guarantees for their safety were given. Gen. O'Haron agreed to deliver up Marquez if his own life would be spared. Prince Salm Salm, who was on Maximilian's staff, through his wife, the Princess, requested permission to go to Queretaro and promised to induce Maximilian to surrender by representing to him the terrible condition of affairs at the capital.

Bazaine, before leaving, proposed to deliver up Maximilian, Miramon and Marquez, together with all the arms and ammunition to the Liberals in plain cities still held by the French; and also proposed selling terms. The proposals were rejected as dishonorable.

Trial of Surratt—Washington News.

NEW YORK, May 25.—The Tribune's specials state that forty witnesses have been subpoenaed by the Government on the trial of Surratt, including St. Marie Weichman and others, and think it an impossibility for him to escape conviction. Spiritualism Exploded—A Rich Scene.

For several days past the spiritualist, Church, who was exposed some time ago, had an advertisement in the city newspapers that he would give a spiritual seance on last night at Beck's Hall, with lights burning at the time, and would also expose the whole phenomena of spiritualism and explain the explosions of other spiritualists throughout the country.

The attendance at the hall last night was not as large as might be expected, but consisted of perhaps about one hundred persons, ladies and gentlemen. The admission fee charged was half a dollar for each person.

The performance opened by the younger Church, the medium, making a brief speech, setting forth that he had not given this exhibition to expose spiritualism, but merely to expose its wonders and allow the public to judge of the truth of the doctrine.

At the end of the hall at which the speaker delivered himself, there was a platform erected, completely enclosed by a heavy canvass, almost impervious to light. This was called the cabinet, and in this the medium was to give his demonstrations. A committee from the audience was appointed, and upon this committee there happened to be two newspaper men, one from the Journal and one of "ours." When Church went into the cabinet, he was to be secured to the chair. While this was being done by the Courier man, the Journal fellow was stitching the rear of the medium's pants to the back of the chair. He also took a few stitches through the collar of his coat and shirt. The medium was then left alone in the cabinet, and promise was given of the speedy appearance of "Ninwaukee," the great Indian, and the little Swiss girl. A gentleman with a Grecian nose and green glass spectacles then played several doleful tunes on the violin, during which time it was supposed the spirits would be in the cabinet. But the fiddler fiddled, and the audience waited patiently for over an hour, and no spirits came. They were "sewed up." Those stitches in the rear of the medium's pants, which also had gone in and taken hold of his drawers, did the work. He was tight. He couldn't get out of his clothes or the chair without breaking some of the cords. The accordeon and bones were on the opposite side of the cabinet, about twelve feet from him, and not a sound could be got out of them. "Ninwaukee" and the "Little Swiss" were not around. They were done for. After about two hours work in the cabinet, the audience in the hall keeping very orderly all the time, it was announced that the medium could not concentrate the spiritual influence, and the audience was requested to come back to-morrow night. The medium was too tight, and the audience knew it. The Journal man had fixed him, and they commenced balooing for their money to be refunded. The Rev. Jenkins, who was a partner before, was present nearly all night, but slid out at this crisis. Old man Church then announced that the money would be returned at the door; but on the people going there it was found that the door keeper, a fellow named Henry Meyers, had left. The crowd then became rampant. They seized the two Churches and led them down stairs on Jefferson street to swing them to a tree, or give them a terrible beating, but just at this time, when the Churches were begging for mercy and praying, Meyers was found with the money box. They then took all of them back up stairs in the hall, and made Meyers refund the money, which he did in a hurry. The scene was a most ludicrous one. The excited crowd dragged old Church and his son down stairs, hustling them around, and threatening them, and they begging and pleading for dear life. They certainly thought that their time had come, and we have no doubt but that they have ere this skedaddled from the city, and we are rid of another batch of rascals.—Louisville Courier, March 30th.

Terrible Accident in a Massachusetts Marble Quarry.

The Springfield (Mass.) Republican gives the particulars of the catastrophe by which five persons lost their lives on Wednesday at the marble quarry of M. A. & J. K. Freedley, in West Stockbridge, Mass. It appears that the quarry is close by Williams River; and the workmen were employed on a vein of marble extending under the river, and which they excavated to a point nearly beneath the river bed, at a depth of seventy-five feet from the surface.

Along this vein the gang of fifteen laborers commenced work as usual, Wednesday morning but in circumstances of extreme and unusual peril from the overhanging mass of rock, on which the warm rain and removal of the frost had acted with powerful effect. During the forenoon an occasional piece of rock crumbled and fell from near the surface, as if in warning of what was to follow, but the men continued their labors without heeding the indications. At half past three o'clock in the afternoon, about five minutes before the disaster, quite a large piece of stone fell, and fearing some accident was impending, the foreman, Thomas Richardson, stepped back a little from the workmen where he could command a full view of the face of the rock overhanging him. The precaution came too late, for in another instant the whole mass, weighing not less than 500 tons, loosened from its position and came crashing down upon the helpless men. Mr. Richardson was struck down where he stood, within three feet of the extreme limits of danger, and, four of his workmen, crushed beneath the monstrous mass which shattered and broke into a thousand pieces by the terrible force of the fall. The nine uninjured men who escaped by being at work nearer the base of the vein and further under the ledge, immediately procured assistance to aid in removing the bodies of their dead comrades. Mr. Richardson was buried, except his head and shoulders. His body was extracted after more than an hour's hard labor, and those of Tidings and Deganan were removed with little difficulty. The latter was breathing when taken out. All the bodies were mangled and shattered in various ways, and the death of each, except Deganan, was doubtless instantaneous. The two others were not recovered until Thursday last.

College Boys in 1680.

College students are about the same in one century as in another. Some Dutch ministers, who traveled in the Eastern provinces in 1680, thus describe a visit to Havard College:

We reached Cambridge about 8 o'clock. It is not a large village, and the houses stand very much apart. The college building is the most conspicuous among them. We went to it, expecting to find something curious, as it is the only college or would-be academy of the Protestants in all America; but we found ourselves mistaken. In approaching the house, we neither heard nor saw anything mentionable; but, going to the other side of the building, we heard noise enough in the upper room to lead my comrade to suppose they were engaged in disputation. We entered and went up stairs, when a person met us and requested us to walk in, which we did. We found there eight or ten young fellows sitting around, smoking tobacco, with the smoke of which the room was so full that you could hardly see; and the whole house smelt so strong of it, that when I was going up stairs, I said: This is most certainly a tavern. We excused ourselves, that we could speak English only a little, but understood Dutch or French, which they did not. However, we spoke as well as we could. We inquired how many professors there were, they replied not one; that there was no money to support one. We asked how many students there were. They said at first thirty, and then came down to twenty; I afterward understood there were not probably not ten. They could hardly speak a word of Latin, so that my comrade could not converse with them. They took us to the library, where there was nothing particular. We looked over it a little. They presented us with a glass of wine. This is all we ascertained there. The minister of the place goes there morning and evening to make prayer, and has charge over them. The students have tutors or masters. Our visit was soon over, and we left them to go and look at the land about there.

COTTON-PICKING MONKEYS.—A communication in the Galveston News, from a Texas planter, furnished evidence that an attempt had absolutely been made to teach monkeys to pick cotton. The writer says he was a cotton planter in the State of Georgia in 1849, but being obliged to visit the Island of Trinidad on business, he was prevailed on to purchase some monkeys there, in order to make the experiment as to their capacity for labor. He reached home with twenty-three of these creatures, which cost him when delivered on the plantation, $48. He gives the following as experience: "I was mighty well pleased when I received my monkeys. Their arrival turned my plantation topsy-turvy. For two weeks nothing was done by whites or blacks but play with the monkeys. The overseer got one of the brightest looking and remained at his house most of the time watching the monkey's tricks, and I must confess that my wife, myself and children were in the same business. Seeing that this would not pay, I began making preparations to go to work. I had reckoned on one negro managing ten monkeys, picking as much as three negroes. For the next two weeks, all hands, white and blacks, were engaged in the cotton field teaching monkeys. The result was somewhat different from my calculations. Instead of one negro managing ten monkeys, etc., it took ten negroes to manage one monkey, and then the monkey did not pick a pound or an ounce of cotton! I became disgusted, gave all my neighbors that would accept a monkey, and about a fortnight since sold the last eight to a traveling menagerie at five dollars apiece. My monkey speculation has thrown me behind six weeks in cotton picking. The next time I go to Trinidad I don't think I shall want any more monkeys!

Don't change your business every time you have the blues—change is not beneficial. If you are cheated, don't try to get even by cheating some one else; if you have made a bad bargain, don't stop trading, but make a better one next time. If you get in a scrape, get out, and look closer next time—never be caught twice in the same trap. People may forget errors, but they have no sympathy for fools. If you wish to be a leader, always go ahead; and remember the smoother the route you pick out, the less complaining there will be among your followers. And above all, Valter, my boy, no matter what the circumstances, never be the first to go back on your friends. Be honest and faithful—God and good fortune will never desert you.

DOWN ON TOBACCO.—One of the Bishops of the M. E. Church received, recently, a petition from a church, which tells its own story in a few words, as follows: "Our pastor's term of service will expire at the next session of our conference. You will then make a new appointment. Please send us a pastor that uses tobacco in no form. Our pastor and presiding elder have spit us and smoked us almost to death. We cannot endure it any longer."

Map Making

That oracular exponent of British sentiment, the London Times takes very cooly the manifest probability that the United States will one day absorb the whole of the North American continent It intimates that Great Britain cares very little about retaining her North American Provinces, and declares that while the mother country would not sell them, she would be happy to make them independent as soon as they desire it and leave them to form new connections or to choose whatever destiny they please The acquisition of Russian America by the United States is regarded as likely to hasten these changes British Columbia, for example, is closely connected with the Pacific States of the Union, and the Times thinks that if the influences which grow out of this connection are destined to overcome the spirit of loyalty and attract that territory to the United States, such a result cannot be helped, and the transfer of the Russian Possessions "will but hasten the operation" This is dealing with the subject in a manner which little accords with England's former policy But it is a sensible view of things, and is indicative of the growth of new ideas in England as regards her colonies in America It shows, furthermore, that Englishmen have a perception of the "manifest destiny" of the United States, and know that agencies are at work on this continent which, if unchecked, will tend to assimilate and unite the whole of it, and which will finally mould all its parts into one homogeneous mass. Of course, Englishmen who look at the matter from this point of view are reconciled to these prospective changes, for they are too wise to remonstrate against an occurrence which they perceive is likely to be brought about by the operation of natural causes.

The great British newspaper believes that the late purchase was made by our Government "with a view of asserting the claim of the United States to supremacy on the whole North American continent." This is its interpretation of the philosophy of the transaction. Yet this probability is contemplated in England without alarm, and the paper from which we are quoting, counsels its countrymen "not to place themselves in a false position by vain remonstrances" against this tendency of things. This, undoubtedly, is a wiser course than that which Great Britain has been accustomed heretofore to pursue. It is wiser to let the natural tendencies of the people of different States to form political and other connections suited to the requirements of their condition develop themselves in a natural way, than to take so much trouble in regulating the map of the the world on arbitrary principles without regard to the wants of the people who are most interested in the proceeding Map making has cost England a world of trouble, and though it has often contributed to her greatness and glory, it has kept her embroiled with other nations, has piled up her debt till it is almost twice as great even as ours, and has thrown inconceivably heavy burdens upon her people. But this policy is changed. In cases where Great Britain used to brisk up for a fight, she now coolly proposes an argument and proceeds to talk philosophy. This is a decided improvement upon the old habit. Instead of seeking to be affronted and inquiring after the manner of Touchstone, who it was that bit his thumb at him, Mr. Bull is now the composer of quarrels and the pacificator of Christendom.

The United States are in no hurry to absorb the whole continent of North America, preferring to wait for the natural progress of events rather than to enter into arrangements which might complicate and embarrass their own affairs. That a large portion of our people believe that the boundaries of our country will eventually be enlarged so as to embrace it all, is no secret either here or elsewhere. But no part of our people are aggressive, none would wish to seize by force any portion of the continent which belongs to our neighbors. Since the abolition of slavery we have among us no pirates of this sort. But there are many persons, and perhaps the larger share of our people, who, while believing that it is the mission of republicanism to possess this continent, and holding that this result is to be achieved through the instrumentality of the United States, believing that all parts of the continent will yet be attracted together, and, established in the conviction that a mutuality of wants and a reciprocity of interests will make this union desirable and even necessary,—hold also that the true wisdom is to wait for time to bring about these changes, so that the union (if this great union is ever to be consummated) may rest on a basis which will be as enduring as the continent itself

THE MISERY OF ENGLAND —A procession composed of many thousands of idle and famishing people recently marched from the West End of London through the most splendid streets of the great metropolis, begging as they went, for means to relieve their urgent wants. They carried contribution boxes, but contributions on such a scale are hopeless. It was a ghastly company, quiet, pale, ragged, and bearing all the evidences of extreme suffering London contains a multitude of these people, but the great hive cannot swarm. The poor cannot move themselves, and they must suffer and die. The soil and sunshine of broad continents, yet unoccupied, invite them and offer them food, but there is no escape. While this miserable company, preceded by a melancholy fife and drum, were marching through the metropolis and exhibiting their utter wretchedness, the Chancellor of the Exchequer was delivering his report to the House of Commons at Westminster, expatiating on the prosperity of England, and submitting his budget with expressions of supreme satisfaction with the condition of the country and its successful administration! Never was there a more impressive contrast.

The Herald has "gone back" on the colored people. Though it published Nash's speech as a leading article in its editorial columns, it now takes it all back and declared it never meant what it said. The probable explanation is that this speech was published as a "feeler," to try the temper of the Oregon Democracy, and to ascertain by this tentative how far they are disposed to favor negro suffrage. The Herald, finding that its party here was not ready to take the advanced position it has taken in the East and South, recanted immediately, and is now probably holding itself in readiness to come out for negro suffrage in earnest when the proper time arrives.

The "Conservative" or Democratic Convention of Tennessee which was held at Nashville last month, adopted a platform of a description which will hardly be recognized just yet by their party brethren in Oregon—especially as their organs here hesitate to take the final step for equal suffrage. One of the resolutions of the Tennessee Democracy is as follows:

> 4 Our colored fellow citizens being now citizens of the United States and of the State of Tennessee, and voters of this State, are entitled to all the rights and privileges of citizens under the law and Constitution of the United States and of the State of Tennessee

This is about as pointed as Nash's speech, which the Herald published and virtually endorsed.

INTERNATIONAL POLITENESS —A correspondent of the New York Times gives information that

The French Government has carried its politeness to foreigners to such an extreme as to refuse the authorization to play a drama called "The War in America," by Messrs. Malespine and Maret, till the Exhibition is over The authors, who do not take sides in the piece although their sympathies were for the Union and against the rebellion, say that the authorization was positively refused because the sensibilities of some people favorable to the rebellion might be hurt

But the following is the best example of national susceptibilities we have heard of An American who is now here, and who claims to be the most adroit man in the world in the handling of the musket and bayonet went the other day to seek an engagement at one of the Paris circuses offering to fight in the arena (with wooden bayonets) against five of the best musket men in the French army, all at once, one against five The director of the circus said, "No, I can't do that but if you will dress up as a French soldier and whip five soldiers dressed up as Americans I'll give you an engagement!" The Yankee retired in disgust, and at last accounts was still swearing

The following from the Yreka Journal could not have been made more pointed and applicable if the writer had been a resident of Oregon, and had had in his mind the editor of the Herald instead of certain of his brethren of the Democratic press of California

> The Copperhead editors of California are the most 'cheeky' set we ever heard of from the fact that they claim self-important dignity and high toned sentiment yet under that cloak insidiously descend to the lowest blackguardism Like their snaky prototype they spit their venom under disguise or cover instead of openly and honorably

MRS MARY J MASON, 207 East 52d street, New York, Superintendent of D D Babcock & Co and in charge of twelve Grover & Baker Machines, testifies that they are superior for her work to any machine she knows of. She states that her operators work them better, and with less labor and fatigue than other machines Wm Currier & Co, Agents, 103 Front street, Portland, Oregon

The State Rights Democrat of the 25th inst writing of the Willamette Valley and Cascades wagon road says The road and the trail are now open to Canyon City and from thence roads diverge to almost every point in the eastern part of the State A drove of 200 head of cattle passed over it this week and two hundred others will soon do likewise It is unquestionably the best and most direct route to Idaho and Montana Territories

A letter from Umatilla dated May 25th, contains the following The term of our district school expired on last Friday, the 24th and on that day the examination came off which did much credit to the teacher (Mr J D Doardorff) and the pupils The school was composed mostly of small scholars, who had not had much training at school before yet the examination and exercises filled the expectations of the most sanguine Notwithstanding the teacher's request that no cheering be done (I suppose for fear of flattering the small scholars) it seemed almost impossible for the audience to desist Classes of twelve to fifteen scholars ranging from eight to twelve years old, came on the stand with such order made their bows to the audience with such precision, and performed their parts with such accuracy that every one felt like applauding

CAPITAL STOCK, $1,000,000!

Directors:

JOHN PARROTT, CHAS. E. McLANE,
WM. C. RALSTON, A HAYWARD,
LOUIS A. GARNETT.

LOUIS A GARNETT .... President and Manager
JOHN HEWSTON, Jr. Chemist and Superintendent.

THIS COMPANY HAVING GREATLY enlarged their Refining Works, and introduced many other important improvements, are pleased to announce that they feel warranted in again reducing materially their terms of doing business.

THE TARIFF OF CHARGES

Which they now submit to the public—considered with reference to the cost of material and labor—is lower than in any other part of the world, and secures to the mining interest of this coast an important increase in both the minting and commercial value of bullion

Their charges hereafter will be as follows:

FOR ASSAYING DEPOSITS FOR UNPARTED GOLD BARS

One eighth of one per cent (heretofore a quarter) for all amounts over $1,600, and two dollars for any smaller sum. Returns made in twenty-four hours

FOR ASSAYING DEPOSITS FOR UNPARTED SILVER BARS

Two dollars for the gold contained, up to $1,600, and one-eighth of one per cent, for all amounts over that sum, and one per cent. on the silver contained Returns made in twenty four hours.

FOR REFINING DEPOSITS MADE FOR COIN OR FINE BARS

On bullion under 300 parts gold, 2 cents per ounce

On bullion from 300½@600 parts gold, 4 cents per ounce

On bullion from 600½@750 parts gold, 6 cents per ounce

On bullion from 750½@949½ parts gold, 8 cents per ounce

Above 950 the only charge will be for coinage But there will be no charge for refining less than two dollars.

FOR COINING GOLD.

This charge will be the same as at the Mint—a half of one per cent—and which is paid by us to that institution But there will be no charge in future for making fine gold or silver bars from bullion refined by us

RETURNS IN COIN IN FORTY EIGHT HOURS.

Silver contained in deposits for coin will be accounted for at the same rate customary at the Mint.

Gold bars of other Assayers, in good standing, will be cashed by us at the highest market rates

Dust and bullion can be forwarded to us from any part of the country, and returns made through Wells, Fargo & Co's Express

CHARGES AT U S BRANCH MINT

For the convenience of those not familiar with the terms of the Mint, we subjoin the tariff of charges now in force at that institution

For refining bullion under 300 parts gold, 3 cents per ounce

THE PUBLIC SCHOOL AND THE COLORED CHILDREN.—On Monday some of the colored children of the city made application to be admitted to the Central Public School, and of course were referred to the Directors. The Directors very promptly decided that the children could not be admitted; whereat sundry people who are always in mental ill health when they haven't a sensation on hand, were indignant and ready to charge the Directors with injustice and inconsistency. The facts are, as we learn, that at the annual school meeting in April, the question of admitting the colored children to the public schools was introduced, but not adopted. On the contrary, it was voted that $800 of the public school moneys of the city be placed in the hands of the Directors to be used according to their best judgment, to aid the colored people in establishing and maintaining a school of their own. Practically this was a vote of the District against admitting the colored children into the white school, and the Directors, in their decision of Monday, were simply acting in obedience to instructions, as well as in accordance with their own views and judgments. In pursuance of the authority vested in them by the school meeting, the Directors had already rented a house for the use of the colored people and had informed them that the money would be paid over as needed, in the same proportion per scholar as paid in support of the white school; that is to say, if the tuition of a white child cost $20, or any other sum, per year, each colored child sent to school would receive the benefit of the same sum. The Directors very properly declined to hand over the entire appropriation to the colored people to do as they pleased with, because they, the Directors, were charged with its proper expenditure, and the colored school is necessarily as much under their supervision as is the white school. Then, what is the matter? Simply this: that some persons fonder of mischief than of the public good of either white or black, have probably advised the black people to insist on having their children admitted to the white school; that the action of the Directors in relation to the colored school fund is unjust, and that they have the right to the $800, to use as they please and without restraint of any kind from the Directors. At all events, this solution of the matter is easily enough drawn from the talk of the leading colored people. Under the circumstances, after having been voted separate monies for a separate school, the colored people ought not to have listened to the advice of persons who only seem to have an interest in fomenting trouble and who are certainly not friends of either the blacks or the Public schools. The persons who have doubtless thus [ad]vised the colored people are the very ones of all others who would first raise a howl about the admission of the black children into the school and who would first take their own children out of it in consequence of such admission. They may have the destruction of the Public School and the defeat of the proposed colored school in view. At all events, they evidently want a sensation and are not at all particular as to the means for getting up one.

FIRST NATIONAL BANK OF IDAHO.—Mr. B. M. DuRelle who sailed out from the Eastern States by the last steamer, called on us last evening and placed us in possession of the following facts in relation to the First [National] Bank of Idaho. The bank was organized March 11th, 1867, under the act of Congress approved June 3d, 1864. The Directors are B. M. DuRelle of Boise City, C. W. Moore of Ruby City, D. W. Ballard of Boise City, Wm. Hole [illegible] of Idaho City and Joel Feithian of New York City. B. M. DuRelle is President of the [bank] and C. W. Moore, Cashier. The bank is to be located at Boise City and will do a business in currency, gold and dust, with an actual capital of $100,000 which is [to] be increased to $500,000. Mr. DuRelle comes [illegible] with the necessary papers, books and [illegible] generally, to set the bank in immediate operation upon his arrival at Boise City. Our neighbors of Idaho will doubtless find this institution of vast service to them in regulating their present unsettled currency, and in furnishing easy and expeditious means of [illegible] of funds.

PATENT ADJUSTABLE WAGON TIRE.—We, yesterday, saw [a] model of Kirkman & Gray's patent adjustable wagon tire—a very ingenious and at the same time simple arrangement to avoid the necessity for resetting a tire to [illegible] to the swelling or shrinking of the wood work. The tire is parted in one place and in the two ends holes [illegible], into which fit a double-end right and left screw, which being turned one way tightens the tire, and turned the other loosens it. Where this part of the tire comes, a section of the felloe is cut out to make room for the nuts and screws, and the cavity thus made is filled on the [illegible] and outer side by a clasp arrangement secured by [illegible]. For use where tire-setting appliances are not at hand, this patent would certainly prove very convenient.

A SINGULAR WEATHER FACT.—At Yreka, yesterday [morning] the thermometer stood at 48° Fahrenheit; at [illegible] it was 58°; at Seattle, 60°; at Victoria 72°, or [illegible] at Victoria than at Yreka. The operator [there], Mr. Guild, informs us that the average temperature at Victoria has been for a considerable time from [illegible] warmer than the average at Yreka. This is a [illegible] singular fact when we take into consideration that the two points are only distant from each other about [illegible]. There can be scarcely sufficient difference in the [illegible] to account for the difference in [illegible], and if there were, there would still remain the fact that Victoria is warmer by 14° than Portland and 12° warmer than Seattle. Portland is but little higher from the level of the sea than Victoria and Seattle [illegible].

[RECORDER]'S COURT.—In the Recorder's Court yesterday, the following business was transacted: Alex. McCarty was tried on a charge of assault and battery on Sam Turner, at the Live Saloon. The evidence was very conflicting and the Recorder, in view of one or two doubtful points, reserved his judgment till this morning. [illegible] Stephens and Reuben Simpson, colored, keepers of the Live Saloon, were jointly charged with keeping open a tippling house on Sunday. A second charge was entered against the same parties for permitting a gambling device to be set up on their premises. The examination of both charges was postponed till this morning. The facts upon which these charges were based, came out in the trial of McCarty.

AN INVOLUNTARY BATH.—On Monday evening, as Mr. [illegible] Camp was engaged in loading a dray on the P. T. Co.'s wharf, he made a misstep and went ker-souse into the river between the wharf and boat. In a moment he came up and caught hold of the wharf but almost immediately let go and went down again. The second attempt was crowned with better success, and Mr. C. landed himself on the wharf. After getting out he expressed the opinion that the bottom of the river is too wet a location for a good Camp. He said he wouldn't care so much [illegible] only he could hear the boys laughing while he was under water. He thought they ought to have waited till he could join them.

[illegible] 49 CREEK MINES.—A letter to the Walla Walla [illegible], dated May 16th, contains the following news [from] the mines on 49 creek: "News from Creek 49 are still [illegible]. Some of the tender-footed miners come from there with poor accounts, but there is gold there, though much harder to work than at first supposed. Dick Fry's [illegible], who are at work at the mouth of the creek, have already taken out one thousand dollars. Marshall [illegible] are putting in a hydraulic, and they express the utmost faith in their claim. There are about 45 men on the creek.

[illegible] WAGON MATERIAL.—We noticed on the O. S. N. Co.'s wharf, yesterday, a large amount of wagon material, consisting of Eastern made hubs, spokes, felloes, [illegible], oak and ash plank, etc., consigned to the various [illegible] posts of the Upper Columbia and Idaho. It came [from] the importing house of R. H. Law, of this city, who [is doing] a large business in that line and, judging from [illegible], a prosperous one.

A PROCESSION.—Four drays, to each of which [was attached] two heavy government wagons from the [illegible] Wallace & Miller, passed down Front [street] yesterday morning, making a procession [of consider]able length and of rather an imposing appearance. The wagons were taken to the O. S. N. Co.'s wharf [and] they will be shipped to Ft. Vancouver.

THIRD GAME OF CHESS.—The third game of the match between the Portland Library Association [and the] Germania Literary Society, closed last evening, [after] [illegible] hours of playing. Upon the 48th move by the [illegible] their opponents surrendered the game to [them]. This is the second victory gained by the Germania, to one for the Library Association.

[illegible] COURTESY.—The Yreka Journal says: "Old [Col.] Van Vault has been whaling the editor of the Con[illegible] Oregon Press, for some disrespectful re[marks]. "Old Col. Van Vault" started what is now the [Press] and is himself of the same political family as the [present] editor, so the affair is after all, only a family jar [and] instance of editorial courtesy.

[LOSS BY] THE INSURANCE.—Mr. E. P. Fitzgerald, of the [firm of] Fitzgerald & Co.; of Idaho City, arrived in this [city] yesterday evening to look after, as we are informed, [the] demands upon their property, destroyed by the late fire. The loss of the firm as stated by the World extra, [illegible]. Only one firm lost more than that—Fleischner [illegible], $30,000.

[illegible].—The first strawberries of the season [made] their appearance in this market, yesterday, at the [very] high price of one dollar per pound! We wish it distinctly understood that nobody connected with this newspaper [illegible], connived at, countenanced, or winked at [illegible]—well, we can't do the subject justice.

[illegible] GRANT'S PIC-NIC.—The Okanagan, with the [illegible] Hoarde and their guests, will start on [the pic]nic excursion to-morrow at half-past nine o'clock A. M., from the foot of Morrison street. Those holding [tickets] are requested to be on board at that hour, as the steamer will leave punctually at the time named.

[ARRIVAL OF] FREIGHTS.—Arrived per steamer Senator, [from] Oregon City, Tuesday, May 28th 3,032 qr sks flour, [illegible], 120 sks screenings, 118 hf-bbls produce, 222 [illegible], 8 cases do , 29 boxes eggs, 52 cases lard, 1 [illegible] butter, 3 tubs do., 26 kegs dried apples, 4 [illegible] goods, 1 bale furs.

THE PIXLEY SISTERS.—Mr. Thos. Ward announces that [at the] desire of many of our citizens he has secured [the] services of the Pixley Sisters at Oro Fino Hall, [for] this night only, when they will give one of their very [pleas]ant vocal and instrumental concerts.

[illegible] TRIP.—The steamer U. S. Grant starts this [morning] at half past seven for Astoria, on her first trip [on the] advertised schedule. She will return to-morrow.

[TREASURE] [illegible].—By the Cascades steamer yesterday, Wells, Fargo & Co. received $20,000 in treasure from [illegible].

[LUNCH] TO-DAY.—The ladies of St. Stephen's chapel will [give a] lunch from 11 A. M. till 2 P. M. to-day, at Turn Verein Hall; price, 40 cents.

SALE OF A STEAMBOAT AT AUCTION.—The steamer Commodore Perry will be sold at auction to-day at 10 o'clock A. M., by Mr. A. B Richardson, auctioneer, on account of whom it may concern. At the same time and place, Mr. Richardson will sell a lot of ale by authority of the U. S. Marshal.

PERSONAL.—Gov. Woods arrived in the city from Salem, late Monday evening and will remain in town during the week.

Mr. Leland, editor of the Lewiston Journal, arrived by the Cascades boat last evening and favored us with a call.

BIG FREIGHTS COMING.—Capt. Bougman of the Senator informs us that the ware house at Oregon City is crammed full of miscellaneous freights from the Upper Willamette. The greater portion of it, however, is flour, wheat and bacon.

BOAT FOR CORVALLIS.—The Senator will connect this morning at Oregon City, with a boat for Corvallis.

WHAT A COMPARISON.—The first nine of the Pioneer Base Ball Club usually go to Barman Bros.; this morning they go to Vancouver to play against the Occidental Club of that village. The Portland boys are hard to beat, and so are Barman Bros in selling fine custom made Clothing for cash, on corner Front and Morrison streets, formerly City of Paris Store, Vaughn's brick building.

NOTICE TO THE PUBLIC.—From and after this day the well-known FRENCH LAFAYETTE RESTAURANT will serve a first-class table at the reduced price of Seven Dollars per week.

Consumption like the Rattle Snake, always gives warning of its approach. A hacking cough, dull pain in the chest, difficulty of breathing, are the indications that there is more or less irritation of the lungs. PERRY DAVIS' VEGETABLE PAIN KILLER, after a thorough trial, by innumerable living witnesses, has proved itself THE MEDICINE OF THE AGE. Although there have been many medicinal preparations brought before the public since the first introduction of Perry Davis' Vegetable Pain Killer, and large amounts expended in their introduction, the Pain Killer has continued to steadily advance in the estimation of the world as the best Family Medicine ever introduced. It is an internal and external remedy. One positive proof of its efficacy is, that the sales have constantly increased, and wholly upon its own merits. The effect of the Pain Killer upon the patient, when taken internally in case of Cold, Cough, Bowel Complaints, Cholera, Dysentery, and other affections of the system, has been truly wonderful, and has won for it a name among medical preparations that can never be forgotten. Its success in removing pain, as an external remedy in case of Burns, Bruises, Sores, Sprains, Cuts, Sting of Insects, and other causes of suffering, has secured for it such a host of testimony, as an almost infallible remedy, that it will be handed down to posterity as one of the greatest medical discoveries of the nineteenth century.

PIONEER WASHER.

JAMES BRUSIE,

AGENT FOR OREGON AND WASHINGTON TERRITORY.

THIS CELEBRATED WASHING MACHINE IS now for the first time introduced to the Oregon public. It is unrivalled for its simplicity, durability and the rapidity and ease of its action. Washing the dirtiest clothes perfectly clean in from five to ten minutes, with but slight labor, and lasting, with proper care, for ten years. The wear and tear of clothing in washing by this machine is vastly less than by any other known process of washing. It is easily worked by one person.

This Machine captured the Special Premium at the California State Fair, and all that have used it pronounce it an invaluable adjunct to all housekeepers and families and washing men and washing women.

It has been extensively introduced throughout the State of California, and receives the universal commendation of all who have used it.

The undersigned is now in the city of Portland, where he can be seen at Mr. O. Kilbourn's Store, corner of Front and Yamhill Sts., East side, Portland, and is prepared to furnish the Machine to purchasers and also to sell and dispose of County Rights for the sale of the same.

CHARTRES COFFEE!

Manufactory Established in June, 1851.

STEAM POWER, NOS. 625 AND 627 FRONT ST.

HAS CONSTANTLY ON HAND GROUND AND ROASTED COFFEE, GREEN COFFEE of the best qualities. CREAM OF TARTAR and SPICES of all sorts.

The undersigned, who has always enjoyed public confidence for the excellent quality of his Coffee, neglects nothing to justify the good name acquired by his productions, the sale of which daily increases. The acknowledged superiority of his merchandise, which commands here, and in the markets of the interior, a relatively higher price, excites the cupidity of some manufacturers, and every day he sees increasing the number of those who, by counterfeit or imitation of his mark, seek to deceive the public, palming upon them their inferior productions for the genuine G. VENARD CHARTRES COFFEE. This fraud can deceive nobody after a trial, but only adds to the favorable opinion of the consumers, the very flattering though unwilling testimony of the counterfeiters. Nevertheless, buyers should be forewarned, and placed on their guard against this practice.

A Man's Art.

The Metropolitan Theatre one September night, eleven years ago. The house blazing with light and beauty, all eyes intent upon the curtain

Rising, it disclosed a stout female in pink. We looked at her with interest. If not the rose, she had been near it Besides, she gave to many of us our first experience of the genuine hoop. What amplitude, what hitherto undreamed of spread was there! Pink vapor! A bit of cloud, transfused with the glow of sunset, and silvered with radiance from the rising moon? How it flowed and glittered after her as she moved about the stage, this stout Mlle Sarah A merry soul she seemed, with a laugh that vibrated through all her liberal person like a sudden shock through tremulous jelly. We watched her, pleased, yet impatient to the end.

Again the curtain rose. We behold a peaceful scene, a quiet garden, a sleeping servitor. Then entered two, conversing as they came; a man and a woman. He, clad in the garb of a Venetian magistrate; his companion—yes, it is she! Look, yonder, for there she is—Rachel!

O, glorious vision, would I could summon you from the relentless past! Would I could show to others as I saw it then, that pale and spiritual splendor, that charm which was not beauty but transcended it. All that glory has sunk in night; the grave hides it; but who that saw Rachel will not keep forever the dazzling memory?

The play was "Angelo," a vicious little thing of Victor Hugo. Read it if you like—I never cared to—and you will find it melodrama of the worst type, I doubt not. Her genius made it tragedy.

In the last scene I turned my eyes away; it was too real; I shrank from seeing the fatal blow. As I did so my glance was fixed by a far different object. A young man of aspect the most peculiar I had ever met, was gazing intently at the stage; tears, actual tears, were running down his cheek.

The play was over, the audience dispersed. As we made our way slowly through the crush I saw the unknown again, almost at my elbow. Julia saw him too, and recognition brightened her face. "Erastus!" she said, softly, and he turned at once. It was her cousin, Mr. Bolton.

She took him home with us to supper. By the time we were fairly seated at the table, our raptures had abated somewhere near the level of ordinary life. We could speak of delight and analyze its causes. Every one was enthusiastic; even Julia's brother ordinarily so matter of fact. Mr. Bolton alone was imperturbable; his coolness seemed a sarcastic comment on our warmth.

"Wasn't that last scene terrible?" asked Julia. "I shut my eyes—I could not look."

"I, on the contrary, kept mine open," said Mr. Bolton. "I watched her as I used to watch Signor Blitz, to see how it was done.

The effrontery was a little too much, stranger though he were.

"O, Mr. Bolton," I exclaimed, "if I should tell what I saw!"

He turned toward me with the greatest urbanity. "And pray, Miss Dracy, what did you see?"

I made some subterfuge and was embarassed. I felt sure that to expose his little weakness would anger him deeply if not visibly. He was not embarrassed, however, but honored me with a stare that implied something very peculiar in my conduct.

"How exquisitely she was dressed!" said Julia. "It was art, and by no means its lowest phase."

"There's woman's ingenuity," observed her cousin. "She won't own to her delight in an elegant toilet; she must disguise her admiration in artistic fervor. For myself I am above such duplicity. I lost half an hour on trying to decide which was the handsomer, the blue dress with diamonds or the black velvet when she wore the sequins in her hair."

I knew that this was fibbing; that he had not lost a word or gesture. But if such were the tone he chose to take, it was his own affair. If he were ashamed of emotion, considered it weak, just as well. I liked much better the frank enthusiasm of Fred Monroe, who sat next me, and whose sentiments mirrored my own.

By-and-by it was late, and the guests departed.

"Isn't your cousin rather eccentric?" asked Minnie Monroe, as we went up stairs.

"You needn't state it so mildly, my dear. He is odd, excessively so. For my own part I felt sure that if I had been about to be beheaded, and had spied him for the first time among the crowd, I should have lifted up my head from the block and asked the executioner—'who is that' It is not his looks alone, but his demeanor—and then that cold glare he fixes on you through his spectacles did you notice it, Helen? You think I speak too freely, perhaps. I might just as well do it to himself; of all mortals he is the most utterly indifferent to other's opinions."

Being just seventeen, and desirous to please every one I met, this character appeared to me the most unamiable that could ever be drawn.

Julia and I occupied the same room. Just as I was dropping asleep, she started me with the question:

"Do you know what those diamonds were like?"

"No," I answered, not deeply interested.

"Did you ever see a tree in the early morning, hung with rain drops from a shower that had fallen in the night? Do you recall the lustre of those innumerable pendant? Not prismatic—that would be vulgar in comparison—but clear, pellucid drops of concentrated light."

"Yes," I responded sleepily.

And all night there swam before my eyes the great theater, the glitter, the jewels, and that one pale face, with its story of passion and power.

Two years later I was visiting Julia in her own home. It was rather a quiet visit, for Mrs. Farleigh did not greatly affect company. But we rode and walked, read, and talked over our reading, and enjoyed ourselves exceedingly.

As we drove up one morning, great wheel-tracks were visible on the greensward before the house. "The stage has stopped this morning," Julia averred. "Now who can it be? I expect neither guest nor parcel."

Hurrying on we encountered a portmanteau on the [illegible] on the hat stand reposed an unmistak[illegible], and cane.

"Erastus" we exclaimed. The next minute he came out to meet us, bestowing the most business like of salutes upon his cousin and favored me with a brief grip of three fingers in his extended palm.

"Cordial way you have of welcoming a fellow," he said. "Here have I been two mortal hours without a soul to speak to, have looked through all the books, examined the music, and studied each specimen critically. If you had not come just as you did, I should have left in disgust, marched to the station and been off without letting you see me."

"Oh, you couldn't have been so cruel!" observed Julia. "How could you expect me to be looking for you again so soon. You were here a week, you know, in April last."

"That visit was to you; now I have journeyed hither entirely on Helen's account. Somebody told me she was here, so I packed up my valise and came along."

It had pleased Mr. Bolton to establish between himself and me a tone of perfect unreserve as regarded the expression of his opinions concerning me or to me. He called me Helen invariably, and criticised my speech, dress and actions, in a way that made Julia terribly jealous she declared, she having hitherto been the sole object of his zeal in these particulars. It would have seemed absurd to take offense at any of his queries, and I considered him, as I well might, a bearish relation who was fond of me at heart.

"What a color you have, Helen?" he said, surveying me attentively, after the first greeting was over. "Upon my conscience, you are growing a remarkably fine girl. You've never got over those eyebrows, though, and never will."

I studied the decried eyebrows carefully as I dressed for dinner. I had been disposed to admire them myself, though I knew they were peculiar—black, slender, and almost horizontal. Candidly, I could see no reason for altering my opinion now, and wondered what were the grounds of Mr. Bolton's condemnation. However, I did not choose to ask him, and so remained in ignorance.

His stay was protracted to a considerable length, his time devoted to Julia and myself. Mr. Farleigh received but little of his notice, a state of things philosophically borne. He rode out with us, made calls about the country, and patronized tea visits. It was a change viewed with wonder by his cousin, who had never before known him in the character of an esquire of dames. She persisted in attributing the metamorphosis to my influence. No doubt I served as well as any girl, I said, the purpose of the hour. I was some one to be attentive to, to look at, to talk to. Any young lady staying in the house would have been the same.

One morning I was kneeling in front of a book-case, arranging some volumes on the lower shelves, when I heard a voice behind me saying:

> "Satan trembles when he sees
> The weakest saint upon her knees."

I rose quickly and looked at him with disapproval. "I don't like that sort of jesting," I remarked.

"Well, I don't often sin in such a manner—you must forgive the one offense. And now hold out your hand; I want to see if this fits."

He had been very much engaged for about a week in the manufacture of cocoa nut rings and had donated them very freely about the country among the ladies of his acquaintance. One of these rings was now tendered to my acceptance.

"Really, I am obliged to you," I said, "though my gift comes rather late in the day. I suppose your calculations were not quite exact, and you had one more than you know how to dispose of. Or, perhaps, Miss Raymond refused to take it.

"She was not asked"

"I thought you were carrying your best for her. But, I presume you are intending to offer a ring of more costly material"

"Perhaps I am," he replied. "Miss Raymond is by no means an unfavorable specimen of her sex. She is stronger in vanity than in intellect, it is true, her soul, if she has one, must be of microscopic dimensions, but she is good natured and dresses well. One might do worse"

"Erastus," I said, laughing, yet vexed, withal, "how it would delight me to see you in love! Thoroughly, unmistakably, foolishly in love."

"My dear girl, this is a sight you will never enjoy I went through with that years ago, as with chicken pox and other infant disorders, and am proof for ever more. I don't mean to say," he continued after a pause, "that I can never love again, but that I shall never exhibit to the world that sheepish, monstrous condition known as being in love. I could entertain a very tender though rational affection for a woman who was worthy of it."

"There is the difficulty," I said, "With your opinion of our sex, I fear you will not very soon find her."

Erastus had been very busily occupied in polishing my cocoa-nut ring up to the present moment; he now laid it down, and at the same time removed his spectacles. His eyes not accustomed to the unobstructed light, winked a little as he looked at me.

"I have found her," he announced.

"Indeed! And what sort of a person is she?"

"She is handsome," he said, "and young—I admire beauty you know. I should'nt like to walk through a garden and not pluck a rose for myself."

"Is that her only merit?"

"By no means. She has a quick, though not very well regulated mind. So far as I can discover, her principles are correct, her heart warm, her temper amiable."

"A pretty good account," I said. "I believe as you state, not in love. You analyze your charmer quite too coldly. But does she return your sentiments? And who can she be? Neither Julia or myself suspected anything of the kind"

"One question at a time. If she returns my sentiments is just what I want to know. And as for who she is, she is here—she stands before me—her name is Helen—it is you!"

"Mr. Erastus." I cried, in unqualified amazement.

"Yes," he said, with a very polite nod, "it is you!"

"Erastus," I exclaimed, in a provoked tone, "this is too bad. I thought you were really going to tell me about some one. I supposed you were in earnest."

"And so I am, my dear Helen," he said very gravely.

This was certainly new. So absurd and unnatural did it seem that I could hardly persuade myself to give him an answer. He sat awhile in silence, and then remarked,

"Well, I'm waiting."

"My dear friend," I replied, "if you really mean what you say, I am very sorry. I like you very much—but that is all."

Erastus put on his spectacles and took up the ring again.

"Confess," I said, speaking out the belief of my heart, "that this was only an accident you just happened to think of as you sat here."

"Not at all," he answered quietly. "It has been on my mind in some fashion since the night we first met in New York. But I saw there was no chance for me then."

My heart gave a painful throb, and the blood rushed to my cheeks. Was the past never to be put away and forgotten? Must I at each turn meet some remainder?

"But now, after so long a time," he continued, "I thought perhaps there was a hope for me. It was to ascertain this that I came here this summer."

"I am very sorry," was all I said.

"You need not be," he answered kindly. "I don't blame you in the least. I know I am not the sort of person who was ever likely to win the regard of a girl like you. I don't wish to conceal from you that it would have made me very happy if you had said yes. But I feel that you never coquetted with me, and I want you to be certain, dear Helen, that I love and esteem you above any other human being." He spoke with feeling and I was a good deal moved.

"And now," he added, "we will be friends the same as ever."

Such a result of the interview was entirely in his power. It was not in mine.

I thought of it often, and the more it was dwelt upon the stranger it appeared. This man, so utterly indifferent, so incapable of all feeling, had cherished thus long his silent affection! It invested him with an interest otherwise foreign, a little tinge of romance began to associate itself with the spectacles and cane.

Of course it was the wildest idea on his part. I had my visions once, I smiled to think how different. Brilliant, vague, fancies of dark eyes and stately form; of loftiest mind and truest heart; a king among men, and yet subject to me.

I thought I had seen the vision made real; I had believed that the brightest, the most bewildering romance was to come in and be part of my every existence. A brief, cruel experience had undeceived me. With love and lovers I was done. Yet the memory of the old fancies lingered; enough to make me smile, as I have said, at the contrast.

Some days went by with nothing especial to mark their course. Julia, I know not why, talked a great deal of Erastus. She praised his ability but blamed his indolence. This fault I thought inexcusable. A man, I considered, should make himself felt in the events of his time. To waste influence and talent in an easy dolce far niente life, was unworthy; little short of guilt. It convinced me yet more, had I need conviction, of the impossibility of ever—but it was not even to be thought of.

"If he could marry," said Julia, "an intellectual, large hearted woman who would stimulate him to exertion, he would certainly do something yet."

I considered and should have liked to say that a woman of that sort might be more congenially employed than acting as a spur to an idle husband. But that would hardly have been civil, and of course it was nothing to me.

Meanwhile I could not but wonder at his obliviousness of our interview; there was no difference in his manner, not a shade. No allusion ever so light, transpired. Not a troublesome suitor, I thought; easily answered. If he had been very much in earnest he would at least have tried a little persuation, persisted for a few minutes. Probably he was relieved on the whole, to find that his accustomed way of life was not to be broken in upon. Very likely had the answer been different, he would have shown himself just as cold. What a life that would make for one? An accepted, yet indifferent lover! How fortunate that I had never for a moment dreamed of saying yes. It was a little unreasonable, I suppose, to be piqued by his easy acquiescence, yet I cannot deny that I was so.

I have mentioned Erastus' patronage of tea parties, such as gentlemen usually excuse themselves from, or put on with very brief attendance. At one of these gatherings a new face appeared, diversifying the familiar monotony.

I cannot tell precisely what was the charm of Alice Saye. She was pretty but many are prettier. Rather short, with a soft baby roundness, fair, with a beautiful color in her cheeks; but by no means faultless in feature Neither did she possess special grace or fascination of manner, yet every one was charmed by her I was myself—at first.

Julia was in raptures over her. In the beginning I was amused by her eager admiration, but the resultant casting off of her partiality for myself was not quite as pleasant. I had preserved my early regard for Mrs. Farleigh unshaken through all the deeper feeling of these years, the change hurt me a little. Not indeed that Julia neglected me; but you understand how it is when you find yourself no longer first in an accustomed regard. One is always liable to this with persons of Julia's stamp; impulsive in attachments, they are fickle as well. It is best to recognize this fact and submit to it.

But Erastus. There at any rate one would have looked for some consistency. It was not to be expected that this cool deliberateness would be impressed so strongly and so soon Yet it so proved.

Whenever he entered her presence, Miss Saye absorbed him Not as her own will but his, I must do her that justice He was not in the habit of concealing his preferences, or making any sacrifice to appearances I was quite used to this in my own case, quite accustomed to see him neglect every one else in the room for the sake of exchanging mere nothings with me It was now to have the disposition manifested as I now beheld it in totally ignoring my presence I was an old friend, at least, to whom some courtesy was due. Yet I might sit in the same apartment with him for hours without the slightest notice, those pale blue eyes behind the spectacles glanced over me as unconsciously as if I had been a chair or table. Miss Saye had all his glances, all his interest, all his attention

She was good, this girl, I know it, but I did not like her the better. There must have been room in the world for her, and friends, without her coming in my sphere, taking what belonged to me. After waiting awhile I made up my mind to conquer at least one of my realms. I should not submit to be quietly put down and forgotten. I was tolerably confident of my power if I once chose to exert it.

Beautifully my plan worked! At one time it might have imported something to Erastus whether I were friendly and gracious or cool and distant. It certainly did not now

I was vexed at myself for the pain this cost me. If I really cared for him, I thought I should at once desist, I would not court a truant regard But he had treated me with such fickleness—offered me everything one week and withdrew everything the next I should not have complained had he continued my friend, but to sink at once to such entire inconsequence was too much My pride rebelled at the idea of such defeat.

So I renewed my warfare. Such stores of wit and accomplishment as I possessed were brought forth—and to what purpose? One of her incoherent, artless remarks outweighed it all. She had a beautiful, sincere nature, I acknowledged that its charm was genuine, and deserved, perhaps, to triumph. Not the less was I eager to claim my own. I was even guilty of the meanness of trying to outshine her in my dress. It was not difficult—I was rich and she was poor. What did bright hued silks and sparkling jewels do for me? Her soft outlines, her pure tints remained the same. Should the tulip flaunt in her gaudiest colors, the violet is only sweeter by contrast.

And then—by the merest chance—I learned something of the history of the man I had refused. Then, for the first time I knew how much of real worth his odd demeanor had obscured what active, unassuming goodness dwelt under that seeming indolence and impassivity. Why could I not have heard it before! Perhaps, but no, of course my answer must always have been the same. Only I should have understood better the value of the offering, tempted my refusal with more of the gratitude that became me. I recalled with shame the envious rivalry of these latter weeks It smote me with a pang that Alice Saye deserved his friendship far better than I. Why was I not willing to resign it to her?

I will go, was my decision after some inward strife. Here I am superfluous and unamiable At home I can compose myself to receive wedding cards, if it come to that.

Julia heard the announcement with friendly opposition, but I bore it down. Erastus said nothing. Did I suppose he would?

When we were alone he condescended a remark. "There will be one less at our gatherings."

"How flattering!" I responded, with assumed playfulness, and secret acrimony. "One less!"

"You expected me to say, instead how much we should miss you?"

"Not at all. I don't wish any sacrifices of truth to compliment"

"The fact is," continued Erastus, meditating, "that Miss Saye has rather taken the wind out of your sails—with Julia—or did at first. I think the early enthusiasm is cooling down though, and you might as well remain."

What an allusion for him to make! Miss Saye—with Julia.

"Thank you," was my hasty answer. "I've no desire to await the sober second thought of any one's regard."

If you did not wish Erastus to take up a remark it was better not to make it; he understood and replied to this at once.

"What would you have?" he inquired. "You rejected the best I could offer you."

This was coming to the heart of the matter at once. I was covered with confusion—yet perhaps there was a secret relief at the outspoken question.

"What would I have?" I stammered. "I would have a little"—and here I was about to enter my complaint. But no, this would not do. It was not my part to lead him to an explanation. "I don't want anything," was the conclusion of the sentence.

"Your wishes have been pretty well met, then, all along!"

Such rudeness was unbearable—he might have shown a little interest, a little consideration. I turned to leave the room.

"Pray, don't go," he said. "Now, Helen, be reasonable. You rejected my regard, but you don't seem willing that another should accept it. Is that fair? Is that honorable, pray tell?"

"It isn't that—but to be so entirely put aside—to be made nothing when I thought we were such friends—"

"Oh, then it is not my attachment to Miss Saye that you complain of, but only my undue neglect, as you take it, of yourself. But you ought to look at the other side. How, under such circumstances, would Miss Saye be likely to regard attentions to another lady—an earlier flame, etc."

This was more than I expected. I had thought all the time that if it ever came to an open discussion I might find there was some mistake—and now he avowed it.

"I must go, really," I said; "my opinion is of no consequence."

"Perhaps not. You are fickle."

"I fickle!" was my indignant exclamation. "I do not think it is you who should make that charge."

"And why not?" he asked. "Who has a better right?"

I was silent.

"Of all men," he said, "I am the most constant Proof: I have never wavered a moment in the attachment formed two years ago, and announced to you two weeks since."

I started and looked at him in great astonishment.

"And you, Helen," he continued, taking my hand, "are you equally reliable? Or, may I hope that you are fickle, as I said, and a little less determined than you were the other day?"

I began to comprehend both him and myself. Was this what I had wanted all the time? Did I really care for his love? Could I be so inconsistent? I feared it indeed, for a thrill of happiness went through my heart to which it had long been a stranger.

"No answer for me?" he asked.

"I am not fickle," I said, pulling to pieces Julia's finest geranium blossom which stood unfortunately near; "but people have a right to change their minds upon reflection."

And then the past faded away; its sad ghost no longer haunted the forbidden joy. The present shone on me with a strange, peaceful brightness. The warm hand that clasped my own had led me forth from shadow into sun.

Julia came in and saw the wreck of the geranium.

"That must have been your work, destructive one," she said, and scolded me with laughing eyes.

A great charity toward Alice Saye came over me. "What a sweet girl. But might she not have misunderstood the meaning of these weeks?" I thought.

"Erastus," I said, trying to be severe, "you were very bad to both of us. What could induce such conduct?"

He smiled.

"I am not much of a lady's man—not well versed in the tactics that conquer a fair woman's heart. Is it not one of the first principles that jealousy is a powerful ally? It was on that assumption that I acted."

"Oh!" I exclaimed, reproachfully, "were you not above employing a stratagem so very stale?"

"Not more than you were above being subdued by it"

"But are you sure that Alice did not mistake your meaning?"

"Yes, if she understands the use of language; I told her of my regard for you the second time we met. It was the unfailing theme of discourse whenever we were for a moment together."

"And I thought you indifferent, ready to forget!"

"You had so little faith. You really supposed I could relinquish my prize at the first word of discouragement. Oh, Helen!"

It was the last time I could complain of coldness. What a love henceforth surrounded me; what a home was ours! How softly the golden years lapsed by, how summer shone perpetual in our hearts!

On account of the extraordinary demand, our stock of wheels is considerably reduced, and we are entirely out of several sizes; therefore parties contemplating using our wheel, to be certain of securing them in time, should give their order at least three months before they expect to get them, that we may be able to make them by the time needed.

DR. HENLEY'S

Fountain of Life!

THE

GREAT BLOOD PURIFIER!

IN EVERY PROGRESSIVE SCIENCE PERIODS ARrive when a new direction is imparted to its course. Theory tells proceed from discovery of new facts shedding a light which changes the whole aspect of the science. The present is an epoch of this kind, and this Great Remedy, now offered to the public, in connection with the theory on which it is based, is destined to effect an entire revolution in the treatment of the diseases of

by eradicating the disease entirely from the blood. The FOUNTAIN OF LIFE is composed entirely of vegetable extracts; it contains no Mercury or other mineral substance

The Proprietor and Discoverer of this Sovereign Remedy CHALLENGES THE WORLD to furnish anything, from the days of Æsculapius down to the present time, in the arcana of Medical Science, which can vie with or equal the intrinsic properties of this Great Blood Purifier. Its value has been tested with the happiest effect in the most obstinate cases of Scrofula, that baffled the skill of the most eminent physicians in the world No matter what form the dreadful disease of SCROFULA and KING'S EVIL may have assumed, it can in no way be more safely and certainly arrested in its progress than by HENLEY'S GREAT BLOOD PURIFIER Thousands have been swept into their graves, who had they made a timely use of the FOUNTAIN OF LIFE, might now be enjoying the blessings of life and health. It requires an article of real merit and intrinsic value to sustain itself During the stern ordeal of public experiment the FOUNTAIN OF LIFE has stood the test trial, and not been found wanting.

Dr. HENLEY guarantees to CURE any case of SCROFULA or KING'S EVIL in the world, and eradicate the disease entirely from the system, or no charge made—provided they will secure him his pay when they are cured.

FOR REFERENCE:

I would refer you to L L Peck, of Portland, Oregon, and numbers of others, as to what a miraculous effect it had in a short time, in cases that had baffled the skill of physicians for years.
